ARID LANDS.

The report comes from Washington that Senator Stewart has been assored by Senator Plumb, of the Public Lands Committee, that a special meeting of the committee will be held at an early date to consider the bill which cedes arid lands to the various States in which such lands are situated.

Senator Stewart says he is urged by No vada people to press the bill. They want the Government to divide all the arid lauds into prigation districts and make reservations for storage reservoirs, and turn the others over to the States which can make such legislation as will be deemed most boneficial.

As the reclamation of desert lands concerns the hundreds of thousands of people who are seeking homes nearly as much as it does the States in which such lands are situated, Congress should make a liberal appropriation for surveying such lands and locating sites for storage reservoirs. The mand States in which these lands are situated receive no appropriation from the General Government, except for an occasional public building. They have no rivers and harbors to improve, and consequently are not directly benefited by the millions spent aunually for such improvements, though they have to pay a proportionate share of the amount expended. It would, therefore, be nothing more than just for the Government to make a liberal appropriation for locating reservoirs, surveying iritgating canals, e.c., in the arid States, as the reclamation of desert lands would be of incalculable benefit to the country, and would give tens of thousands of landlespeople an opportunity to make homes for themselves. The judicious expenditure of a few million dollars by the General Government in the arid belt would be of as great benefit to the people of the United States as it could be for any other conceivable purpose.

REDUCING SALARIES.

Senator Sproule of Elko has introduced a bill to reduce the salaries of State officers and per diem of members of the Legislature. The reduction will save the taxpayers annually $15,700 on salaties of State officers; $3,600 on per diem of members of the Legislature, and on stationary and miteage $4,200.

Like nearly everything else that is to passed, will not go into effect so far as it concerns State officers, for four years, and it will not effect the present Legislature This virtually nullifies it, as the next Legislatore will have the same right to fix the compensation and allowance of its members that this has.

Reform has a taking effect with the publie before elections, and candidates for office promise to accomplish it, but few or them consider pledges made by them as adjourned. private citizens before election binding on them as officials after they are elected. The genuine reformer, if a member of the Legislature, would reduce the expenses of the body of which he is a member, not Baker correspondence, says: Blaine rethat which is to succeed him, but it so happens that the genuine reformer, if such a ever on for a reciprocity treaty with Canada. person exists in Nevada, never gets into Doubiless the Secretary is correct, but the the Legislature.

A pointed communication from an able lawyer regarding the sworn duty of the Legislature on the subject of calling a Constitutional Convention, will appear in the Journal to-morrow.

Secretary Windom's Funeral. Special to the Journal.

Washington, February 2.—The funeral of Secretary Windom took place to day from the Church of the Covenant, Rev. Dr. Hamlin officiating. The services were simple but impressive, and were attended by members of all departments of the Government. A company of old soldiers from the National Soldiers Home, the grounds of which adjoin Rock Oreck Cemetery, had obtained permission to witness the closing ceremonies, and accompanied by General Wilcox, Governor of the Home, and other officers they were drawn up in double line at the entrance gate and as long as the Cortege passed in the Home band, which beaded the column of veterans, played Nearer my God to Thee." The grave was on the side of a gentle sloping bill, near the center of the grounds and just at the foot of a towering oak. The services at the grave were impressive. Following the casket, which had been carried to the side of the open grave, came members of the Cabinet, two by two, and after them Mrs. Windom, leaning heavily on the arm of her son. Then came the two daughters and following them other relatives and friends, Mrs. McKee, on the arm of the President, Private Secretary Halford and other members of the President's official household were among those who came after. When all had reached the side of the grave Dr. Hamlin read a short chapter from the bible and then invoked the Divine blessing upon the stricken family He thanked God for the good example which the dead Secretary had set before the world and prayed that peace which passeth all understanding, might sustain and comfort those who mourn his less After the cakset was lowered the weeping mother and children stepped to the side of the grave, took their last look at the vio et laden casket and then turned away. FIRST TIME UNDER FIRE.

The memory of the soldier's first battle will never be forgotten by him. The impressions were burned so deeply into peace would not efface or even dim them. Twenty-nine years have passed since I went through the first "baptism of fire," and yet the scenes and events are as fresh and as vivid in the soul vision as thousands were not expecting it. After my enlistment as a soldier I had not long to wait the coming of the fight.

I do not pretend to give a history of an entire battle; no one man can do this unless he draws upon the experience and observation of others, for each actor in any great battle sees the struggle differently from what it appears to others. I shall relate my own individual experience and observation—what I personally saw and heard of one fiercely fought battle -one memorable in the history of the war-my first passing into and through its flame of fire.

Night had enveloped the camp, and I was dreaming of sunny nekds, of smiling another courier who dashed up, exclaiming in tones of feeling:

A second staff officer had been sent back to "hurry up the infantry." The noble fellows were coming. You could hear the deep, muffled hum of their footsteps as the double quicking hurried them onward. As they came up I heard the short, quick command: "Move out by the right flank! Into line! Steady, men; steady! I expect every man to do his duty now!"

Move out, and move on, my dear comrades! Alast many moved on into that column which passed on, never to return. Their first battle was their last.

There was a lull in the firing in front, but out to the leftward volley after volthe brain and spirit that a century of ley poured, out upon the morning airthe sun just rising over the hills to our right. I had followed at the gallop the general, who was hurrying to the front. He was more silent than I had ever known him. Suddenly he halted and turned to see who all were about him.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Esop has told us the tale of a mule which, from overfeeding, galloped about and felt gay, saying to bimself: "My father, surely, wis a high-mettled racor, and I am his own child in speed and spirit." Next day be was sick and wonry; he then exclaimed: "I must have made a mistake my father, after all, could have been only an ass." A man, after eating a good dinner, may feel extravagantly joyous; but next day (I don't mean you to infer he feels like an ass) he is surly and grim, his stomach and liver are singgish.
